BATURDAY ...... MAY 16, 1891. Cleveland and Carlisle.

The resolution adopted by the Demoformer ought to be nominated for President and the latter for Vice-President by the Democratic National Convention of 1892. The adoption of this resolution was totally inconsistent with the course of the convention in demanding the free coinage of silver. We do not regard Mr. CARLISLE as by any means a strenuous advocate of the policy of placing gold and silver upon an equality at the United States mints. must go together. The Democrats can-not straddle the silver question, and can-Mr. Oolessy has done the South a great not whistle it down the wind, unless, in-upon the following plank:

"Recognizing the fact that the United States is the greatest sliver-producing country in the world, and that both gold and sliver were equally the money of the Constitution from the beginning of the Republic until the hostile and fraudulent legislation of the Republican party against silver, which unduly contracted the circulating medium of the country, and feeling that the great interests of the people demand more money for use in the channels of trade and commerce, we tender our gratitude to the Democrats in the last Congress for their almost unanimous votin both houses in favor of the free coinage of eliver, and demand its restoration to the position of equality before the law given to it by our

It is rather ludicrous than otherwise to upon a free-comage platform. And yet this is clearly what the Kentucky Democrats have done. They seem to have the Atlantic went from a southern city thought the public was exceedingly gullible, or else that inconsistency was not worthy of their consideration.

Mr. Warrenson had previously declared the tariff to be the paramount question be- (Alexander Jones, of North Carolina,) of fore the people, and had come out in favor of giving the silver question the "go-by," but we had not supposed it possible that he, or any other good Kentucky Democrat, to be much more important than free coin age, and finally a declaration that Mr. CLEVELAND is the proper man to put upon the free-coinage platform, although be is known to be hostile to the free-coinage bill. The public will soon learn what this Kentucky movement means.

New York Papers and Politics.

These be lively times. John A. Cockemil, the ablest and most successful editor in New York, is to become the editor of the Tammany organ, and the Tammany organ is to advocate the nomination of DAVID B. HILL for President of the United States! Mr. Watterson said not long ago that the Democrats would have to drop both Cleve-LAND and HILL and "go west" for a nomi-greatest chess-player (PAUL MORPHY) were nee. This Tammany movement foreshadows, we fear, a fierce war in the Empire State between the two factions of the Democratic party, and also the transfer of that war to the Democratic National Convention. The HILL men claim that their favorite will get the solid vote of New York in the national convention, and they may be right, for they give plausible reasons for this opinion. But they may be mistaken. Whether they are or not, the quarrel will be carried into the national convention unless the Democrats in the other States shall come to the conclusion that they have stood by New York men long enough and unite their votes upon CAMPBELL, of Ohio, or Morrison, or some pay the half dollar charged per copy. other sound man not mixed up in New York squabbles.

We by no means question the right of Tammany Hall to have an organ, nor its right to do all it can to further the political fortunes of Mr. HILL. Tammany only follows the example of other political clubs when it avails itself of every favorable opportunity to "boost" its favorite for the nomination of the next Democratic National Convention for President of the United States-say, for instance, the club which a few days ago elicited from Mr. CLEVELAND so good a speech on the Democratic party and its principles.

Mr. Cockern will make a great newspaper out of the News. He has ability, exrience, tact—all the qualifications needed in the place which he is about to assume.

Printed Matter in the Mails. Experience teaches the wise. In other words we live and learn-learn as long as we live unless we are very unfortunate or very foolish. We have heretofore called ally charged, he must be a rich man. attention to a number of improvements which have been made in the postal service, and to others which ought to be

One "reform" that ought to be made is to abolish the difference between the postage rates paid by publishers and the rates paid by other people. The Government ought not to establish both a wholesale and a retail price upon mail matter. It is unbecoming a great government like ours thus to discriminate against the persons who send mail matter only in small quantities. The unit of weight of letters is one ounce. Every man in the United States has the right to send a letter from one end of the Union to the other for the small sum of two cents, provided the letter does not weigh over one ounce. The element of distance is not permitted to be made a consideration. So it ought to be as to printed matter. The rate of postage ought to be the same to all persons who employ the mails. An editor ought not to have the franking privilege conferred upon him because he sends ten times as many papers through the mails as does the preacher, or the doctor, or the mechanic, or any other person. If the Government can afford to transmit printed matter through the mails for two cents a pound then every person in the United States ought to have the right to transmit other case. So much an ounce in the one case whether the distance be five miles or BY THE DISPATCH COMPANY, the other case whether the quantity be five pounds or five thousand pounds. And this rule ought to have no exceptiors to it. Printed matter is printed matter. The Post-Office Department classifies mailable matter according to the requirements of the postal laws. We find no fault with the department for obeying what it understands to be the law; but we call upon Congress to do away with these illogical, antiquated regulations. It there were but two classes of mailable matter—namely, written letters and printed matter—the number of postal clerks might be considerably reduced, and much useless labor saved as well as no little of the public money. The great public would find infinite satisfaction in the new order of things. It would receive and be worthy of universal commendation. We shall not undertake to say at what rates per pound printed matter ought to be transmitted through the mails. We say only that whatever the rates all persons ought to be allowed the advantage of those rates without regard to the quantity of mail matter transmitted by them. Why should a printed book be transmitted through the mails at one price and a bundle of newspapers at another price? We know that thousands of books are sent through the mails which are not fit thus to be honored by the Government. But we also know that thousands of news papers—nay, thousands of letters—are sent through the mails which are not fit thus to be honored by the Government. This cratic State Convention of Kentucky on evil inheres in the very nature of the Thursday in which is mentioned "the postal system and cannot be eradicated, policy of Grover Cleveland and John G. We must do all that we can to make the CARLISLE" can be considered as nothing Post-Office Department a clean one. But more nor less than a suggestion that the | we must not do evil that good may result.

As rear-platform orations, most of them will take tolerably high rank, and he can afford to indulge in a self-satisfied smile, when he remembers that no ill befell him greater than delivering to school-children observations intended for their parents,

The next thing will be the settlement of the bills of charges for the special train. No doubt Mr. Harrison will give his check for the amount. After all the publications about "the gitt cottage," and the annoy-ance he suffered therefrom, it is not probable that he will pursue any other course. But if Mr. Hannison is able to pay all the cost, and the figures are as high as are usu-

It is too soon to estimate the net politi-cal results of the President's trip. At this moment, with Mr. BLAINE ill, the prospect seems very favorable to him, and if the National Republican Convention were at this moment in session he would carry it easily; but a year hence his course may not be so smooth. No man will watch coming events more closely than he; but it is not yet certain that he can control them.

A Half-Ton Man.

Mr. OGLESBY in his interesting little book on Southern Thinkers mentions by the way that the largest man that this country ever produced was MILES DARDEN, a North Carolinian, who weighed 1,000 pounds.

He pursues the subject no further than this, as it was not in the line of his inquiry, but we would like to know something more about Mr. DARDEN, and especially if the weight given is correct, and how long he

"It may be worth while to say that in celebrating these (Colonial) events we should celebrate the present style date, because if we retain the old date we really celebrate the wrong date (day). For instance, to celebrate the arrival of the colony at Jamestown on May 13th present style, is equivalent to asserting that they the one case so the quantity of printed pre-

Yet the new style did not come into vogue until well-nigh three hundred years afterwards. Would Mr. Brown celebrate the 23d of October?

Taxation Questions.

There is no problem more difficult of solution than the taxation problem. For hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years, men of learning, business training, and leisure have devoted their attention to this subject. Schemes innumerable have been proposed, but not one has ever been successful in placing the burthen of taxation upon shoulders upon which it did not bear heavily. There are students of the taxation problem who hold that it is not important for the Legislature to levy the taxes necessary for the support of the Government upon any particular class in the community, rich or poor, seeing that, so they contend, taxes will adjust themselves properly under the operation of the laws ot Nature. HENRY GEORGE's theory is that all taxes should be levied upon land, and consequently that none ought to be levied upoa personal property, nor upon houses, nor upon any product whatever of human skill and industry. He supposes that that method of taxation would remove from the body politic many of the ills to which it has so long been heir, and impart new vigor and new life to the laboring masses. We can see no merit, nor even plausibility, in Mr. Geonge's scheme. It is a wild theory, unsupported by any facts known to us, and advocated, so far as we are aware, by few or no persons who are well grounded in the principles of political economy. Peculiar systems of taxation obtain in a few of the States of this Union, but the controlling theory of the law-makers is that all property, whatever its name or nature, should be taxed according to its value. They would not think of levying a tax which did not reach, or try to reach, not only lands, tenements. heriditaments, but every species of per-sonal property. Nor would they think of taxing a man upon an income when he had no income, but they would tax the man of the little-ewe lamb (to wit, a shanty) as much in proportion to its value—nay more than-they would tax the flock of the nabob (to wit, his fine mansion). Here omes in the suggestion that wherever the law recognizes the obligation of the Legislature not to tax the first few hundred dollars of a man's income ($600 is the exemption in Virginia, and sometimes more,) it suggests to the owner of a single house that he ought not to be taxed on the first few hundred dollars of the assessed value of that house. A few years ago Maryland had a tax mmission which thoroughly investigated | boro' May 18, 1892. the whole subject of taxation in all its bearings, and gave to the Legislature and people of the State a fund of information and suggestions which has not yet ceased to do its work in the public mind there. Professor Elx, of the Johns Hopkins University, was a member of that commission. When we have said thus we have said enough to convince the intelligent reader that the report of the Maryland Taxation mmission is a document worthy of perusal and study by all persons who feel an interest in taxation problems in Boston.

We have before us a report recently made by a special commission on taxation appointed by the Mayor of that city, in which report taxation problems are discussed with more or less plausibility of argument and a fair show of familiarity with the principles involved, but by no means treated with that ability which marked the long report of the Maryland Commission. We shall not attempt to give the arguments or illustrations of the Boston Commission, but we will state the conclusions reached by the intelligent gentlemen composing that commission, and let the reader see bow vague and unsatisfectors is the outcome. We note as follows: with the principles involved, but by no factory is the outcome. We quote as follows: SUMMARY.

We are of opinion: First. That the attempt to tax municipal bonds results in a loss rather than in a gain to the cities and towns issuing such bonds. Second. That a man should not be taxed for the gross amount of his property, but should only be taxed for the net amount of his property after deducting his indebtedness. Third. That the income of individuals or partners, derived from property subject to taxation. hould not be taxed, even though the amount of ercise of skill and care. Fourth. That all forms of double taxation

If this "summary" sheds all the light upon the taxation problem that "the Hub of the Universe" is capable of shedding upon it, then the rest of the world must indeed be in darkness, or else Boston does not ment the credit she has had accorded to her as to Past Grand Master of sound financiers and economists.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

I noticed in to-day's editorial columns a reference to the annulling of the police regulations as to crowds on Seventh and Broad streets. I would first heartly approve of the Disparce's remarks, and would state that I accidentally happened two days ago to be one of Chief Poe's victims.

To explain the above I shall state that I To explain the above I shall state that I and a friend of mine were standing on the above-mentioned corner when a policeman approached and said: "Move on; you must not stand here." Now, inasmuch as we had not been there a minute, and knowing nothing of the reason for the regulation, I for the moment felt indignant: but so soon as I learned the true cause of the policeman's course I most heartily approved of his conduct. Such is the opinion of a stranger. Tell the Chief of Police to keep the old rule in force.

Va., May 14.—We have had a long dry spell of weather, and our farming interests have suffered to an unusual extent for the spring of the year. A gentle rain commenced falling yesterday evening, and has continued ever since. The ground is now being thoroughly wetted, and our hope for vegetation has been revived.

Candidates for county offices are zealously engaged in canvassing the county.
Both political parties are fully represented by their nominees, each doing his

The liar is not popular. The cautious say to themselves, "I wonder what he says of me?" and avaid him. The innocent believe him, but, their eyes being opened, are naturally indignant. The boastful liar is generally envious, and very likely to be suspicious, but malicious and vindictive he is not, as a rule. His fabrications paturally have for their raison d'être a lesire to show you what a wonderful fellow he has been, is, and will be. He will lead you to believe that he is the first in peace, first in war, and first in the hearts of his countrywomen—and of all other women, for that matter. When not lauding himself he is swagering about his family or his belongings. Sooner than not boast of something he would accuse himself of murder, arson, or theft. cuse himself of murder, arson, or theft.
With a decline of prosperity his lies redouble, and total failure finds him in the condition of the frog in the fable that burst with arrogance. He is very curiously and wonderfully made, and I have given him much affectionate study.

It eeems almost a pity to balk him, he enjoys himself so thoroughly. He will tell you of meeting and conversing with people he has not seem to be much harm in him, and he is generally as honest as his neighbors in money matters. Nothing is easier than to draw the liar out. When I was eighteen I met a lovely specimen of the boastful har. It was a revelation to me. The vain-glorious female liar spins you yarns concerning her children which Baron Munchausen might have fathered without blushing. Her clothes, too, will be found to have cost more than those of others. I had quite an accomplished liar of this kind staying in my house once. I had been warned in advance that everything she bought cost forty pounds. She described her gowns and cloaks for five years past, and the priz fixe of all her tradesmen was two hundred dollars. This same person was much surprised when I came home minus backbone after riding a young horse twenty-three miles.

"I think nothing of riding that distance any morning before breakfast," she said.

May she be forgiven!

It is a curious fact that lying is more or less contagions. I suppose that if one were to live in the closer relations with an active liar, and, for decency's sake, uttered no protest, one's own sense of truth would be blunted.
